

Dr. Saffold, 57, D. C. Specialist, Dies at Home

Veteran of War Medical Service Had Been Ill Several Months.

Dr. Guy Stark Saffold, 57, prominent ear, nose and throat specialist, and veteran of the World War medical service, died yesterday at his home, 9127 Thornhill road, Silver Spring, Md. He had been ill several months.

Dr. Saffold had practiced in Washington and Maryland more than 30 years. A native of Montgomery County, he was graduated from George Washington University medical school in 1904. He became associated with Dr. J. J. Richardson and later went abroad for post-graduate study in London, Berlin and Vienna.

In recent years Dr. Saffold had been a member of the staff at the Episcopal Hospital. He conducted private practice with offices at 1728 I street northwest.

During the World War Dr. Saffold held commission as captain in the Army Medical Corps. He served in France at an A. E. F. evacuation hospital from August, 1918, to April, 1919.

An enthusiastic golfer, Dr. Saffold was a member of the Washington Golf and Country Club, the Congressional and Columbia County clubs. He also was a member of the District and other medical societies.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lenore Reach Saffold; three children, Guy Stark Saffold, jr., Rosemary and Virginia Reach Saffold, of Silver Spring; a brother, Ray Phillips Saffold, El Paso, Tex.; and a sister, Mrs. H. F. Sommers, of Hongkong.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night, but the burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. Honorary pallbearers will be Karl R. Lash, Dr. A. W. Valenti, Dr. J. Russell Vayryne, jr., Dr. F. X. McGovern, Dr. Harry F. Anderson, Dr. J. C. Bradley, Dr. B. L. Jarman, Richard Engel, and W. Parker Jones.

House Painter Does Portraits

Carl Nyquist, a house painter, has had the time to devote to his hobby of portrait painting. His first exhibition opens today at the Public Library.

Painting Houses Half the Year Finances Artist Rest of Time

When Carl Nyquist says he's a painter, he means it. Nyquist is a small, quiet, white-haired man, Swedish by birth, who paints houses six months of the year so that he can afford his hobby, which is painting pictures. This is his picture painting season, and it has been a highly successful one. His first exhibition opens today at the Public Library.

He shares a studio-apartment at 1714 Pennsylvania avenue northwest with Howard Svenson, who works on the local WPA art project. He'll work there with his oils and canvas until the spring house-painting season opens. Then he'll go out and paint enough houses so that he can support himself through the summer picture-painting season. "Someday maybe I'll earn enough so I won't have to paint any more houses," he said yesterday.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The Wrong Information. It goes without saying that the more information one partner can give the other the better is their combined chance to reach the proper contract. But this is not the whole story. There is information and information! Since the number of bids that either partner can have on a given hand is necessarily limited, it is vital to discriminate among the facts that can be expressed. In today's hand North thought that he was transmitting an accurate picture of his own hold, but he left out the most vital feature.

The six club contract would have been made if South had been able to guess the club situation. Not being second-sighted, declarer laid down the ace and then the queen, with the reasonable hope that he could capture the club ten either on the second or third round of the suit. Unfortunately the adverse distribution made this impossible, and the contract was down one. But even if the small slam in clubs had been fulfilled the contract still would have been a very bad one in comparison to what it should have been.

North's bidding had made it impossible to reach the correct contract, namely, hearts. He had bid two hearts over South's one club
